

“I will only tell to u, not to them”

It is hard to tell our stories to everyone were not close too, specially to a stranger, who does not value our existence and feelings for keeping us from hurt. We are having a hard time in telling to someone about our stories even if the part of us, in need and have need of someone to vent out but we have to be careful of who will tell about our stories because it may led us into not telling our stories anymore.

We all find it hard to tell our rants, emotions and stories to anyone, since, we do not know if they actually listen to it. And it is not easy to earn our trust, as well as them. If they are the people who does not appreciate others concerns, as we look the same opportunity to them, only to give the fair treatment of what we want, they are the one who make us not to go outside our comfort zone. It make us more afraid for telling our stories to anyone, particularly to a strangers. The weight of realizing why we should have to deal also about them, when all we wanted was to express our emotions and stories to reduce the weight we are dealing with. And yet, they only double the weight we have.

We all know that we have our close friends who is on our sides, and can tell our stories but, we are scared also to hear from them what they will say to us, like they are telling that we are not learning are lessons instead of paying attention to us, there friends. However, they misunderstood us without listening to our stories, sayin we keep on repeating the same mistake even if its not. We only wanted was to listen to our emotions and let out all the burden that we have. Please, entertain our concern.

For that reason, we are now find it hard to believe, having a hard time to, does not deserve those people should be aware for telling our rants, emotions and stories to anyone, even if they say that they will listen to us no matter what was going on, or having the same situation with us they put their trust in us we are lack of valuing others feelings because of some things that make us think that they does not concern us, they our not our friends, and they only stranger to us. Except for us, we believe that strangers should be respected for the reason that we do not know them so, we have to be good to them, therefore, they will undestard the pattern of what we want to say, and to break the cycle of not considering others feelings.